
2003 Recipients

When Kyle Amber was six years old, his older brother was diagnosed with leukemia. So Kyle formed the only student-run organization affiliated with Jackson Memorial Foundation, Kids That Care, to help children with cancer and other life threatening illnesses. He has raised more than $100,000 and volunteered countless hours through Kids That Care projects.

Nick Buoniconti co-founded and established The Miami Project to Cure Paralysis, the largest and most comprehensive spinal cord injury research center in the world. His promise, to help his son Marc to walk again after he was paralyzed playing college football, has been extended to the millions worldwide who are also living with paralysis.
